ELD. Z. T. WILLIAMS' LETTER.

On Board Humbert, From Naples to March 30, 1900, Editor of the News: We arrived at Naples on the 27th inst. at 5 o'clock, as anticipated in my last letter. It was raining very hard when the steamer landed, but in a little while the ship was besieged with boatmen, hotel drummers and carriagemen, and of all the chattering one ever heard-worse than a lot of geese in feather time. Finally, one man approached who could speak English, who represented the Belle-our Hotel, and said he was an American soldier and would take us to a good hotel run by English speaking people. So, we bargained with him to take us a shore and to the hotel, six of us, for 13 francs, equal to $2.60 in American money, which would be a little less than 44c. for each; and we were pleased with our bargain, and away we went in the little boat, baggage and all to the shore, into the Custom-House, and all the question asked us was, "Have you any tobacco, cigars, etc., and as none of us use tobacco, save one, and he had divided his supply, putting in the pockets of the other fellows, and had none in his grip. Then we took two carriages to Hotel Belle-our, which was some distance from the custom-house. We found a splendid hotel, well situated, the proprietor speaking English very nicely; but when we come to settle with the old American soldier, we were charged with 24 francs instead of 13. So on explaining the matter he said he had to pay the porters for carrying our grips from boat, through custom-house to carriages, and had tipped the custom-house officers with a few francs in order to help us through. But we told him we had carried our own grips and had not authorized him to tip any one to favor us. So we paid him according to agreement and left him-swearing. This was our first experience with the wellknown Italian way of doing business. If this old fellow had been an American soldier, he was well up in Italian tricks. Our hotel was all we could ask, and very cheap, eight francs per diem. We had a good supper and all enjoyed it, as we had gotten completely worn out with burnt coffee and rough and yesterday a heavy gale lean beef and poor goose, After took a stoll around the city. We learned the run of these coins very quickly. We are all delighted with the variety of things to be seen in Egypt. From Aleandria to Cairo by rail is one grand panorama from start to finish. We met with wonderful change in the climate here. We are compelled to exchange our heavy underwear for light. The mosquitoes and gallinippers thick as hops, and some of the boys do complain a little of bed-bugs. We expect to take our first donkey ride tomorrow. They pace like tops here and go with a push, I mean a boy follows with a long lash and does the pushing. We are keeping real well and getting plenty of goat milk and butter. We take the milk boiled and eat the butter with both eyes and nose closed. Good bye.

The Spring Poet.

From The Louisville Times:-"Col. Billy Breckinridge is not the only Easter songbird on the limb. We present herewith as a companion piece to his gladsome spring outburst, the following trill from the mellow throat of Mr. Coogler, the cockatoo poet of South Carolina:"

"Spring is here. The rays of the morning sun kiss the dew from the lips of the budding rose. The little violet a sense of love doth bring, as we gift of spring. From the valleys and hills to the very heavens above the air is filled with the sweetest notes of love. * * * On the hills bedecked with flowers fair and grasses green we behold the grandest picture our eyes have ever seen. The woodcock hammers on the bark of the maple log, while into the lazy streamlet leaps the frog. The rabbit plays in the sand beside the lonely mill while the watchdog is heard across the distant hill. The bluebird, the gentlest and fairest bird of spring, is wearied by the stroke of the martin's cruel wing."
